Deny it and Say
President is Better

(ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—President Wilson's condition remains much the same as for the past several days, and his organs are functioning normally, said the bulletin issued today by his physician.

The bulletin follows:

"White House, October 13, 1919,

12.15 p. m.

The president's condition remains much the same as for the past few days; his temperature with the exception of one day, pulse and respiration rate, heart action and blood pressure are normal and have been so since the onset of his illness. His kidneys are functioning normally.

(signed) "Grayson,

"Ruffin,

"Gitt."

After bulletin was issued Dr. Grayson said he and other physicians attending the president, would continue to stand on their bulletins and would not deny rumors as to the president's condition or enter into any discussions concerning them.

Mind is Clear.

Dr. Grayson said that while he would insist that the president remain quiet and not participate in affairs of state, some occasion might arise where he would have to give his consent to the president taking executive action. He added that the president's mind was clear and that he was perfectly capable of forming instant judgment on any matter that might come up.

Dr. Grayson gave assurance that if any material change occurred in the president's condition, the fact would be made known. Nothing would be kept from the public if the president's condition should become suddenly critical, he said.

While indicating that he has every confidence in the president's ultimate recovery, Dr. Grayson feels that he must guard carefully against any possible relapse.

Reports Untrue.

White House officials resented publication of reports that the president's condition was such that he could not attend to his official duties should matters of importance arise.

The president could sign bills today if they were placed before him, but we are not putting them before him," one official said.

Those close to the president said present state of health the president should not be called upon for information or action in such matters.

The usual weekly meeting of the president's cabinet will be held at the White House tomorrow with Secretary Lansing, of the state department presiding.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Official silence is the White House attitude toward an announcement emanating from New Hampshire late last night that United States Senator George

H. Moses, Republican, in a private letter from Washington to a friend, had described President Wilson's illness as attributable to a brain lesion which would incapacitate him for public duties.

In intimate administration circles outside the White House the disposition was unanimously to discredit that wholly unofficial diagnosis of the president's illness. High officials gave it privately as their judgment that the Moses letter, if correctly quoted, contained an exaggerated account based on guess-work.

Are Rumors Only.

The White House attitude of declining to issue any denial, even though the giving out of the Moses letter brought generally before the American public one of the many rumors that have been in undecurrent circulation regarding the president's condition, was one of refusal to be drawn into dignifying any of those rumors, by discussing it.

Wets Raise Issue.

Simultaneously, however, a development was reported today which might force the issue of whether the president's illness constitutes a "disability" under the constitution and whether pending legislation can become law without the president's signature if the president is too ill to admit of presentation of the legislation of him personally.

It was declared that the wets are to make their last stand against prohibition by questioning in court the validity of the dry enforcement law just passed by congress, if at the end of a ten-day period the president has been unable to have the bill submitted to him. They will quote the federal constitutional provision that every bill passed by the two houses "shall be presented to the president of the United States."

The Moses letter was announced on the eve of the tenth day since

President Wilson was pronounced "a very sick man," his trouble having been diagnosed as nervous exhaustion. In the period since that bulletin from his physician, the daily

White House bulletins have recorded slight but steady improvement followed by an announcement yesterday president "shows signs of continued improvement, but his condition is such as to necessitate his remaining in bed for an extended period."

MAY STOP
COAL STRIKEPresident or Cabinet May Take Hand in Averting
This Calamity.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Some official action, either by President

Wilson or the cabinet, to avert the threatened strike of soft coal miners

November 1, is to be expected, it was said today at the White House.

Officials regard the matter as one requiring governmental action if other efforts to avert a tie-up of the coal mines fail.

Officials are hopeful that the miners and operators will work out an amicable solution and press reports from Philadelphia that it was probable the negotiations would be renewed were read with interest.

There was no indication that the administration had determined upon a line of action should it find it necessary to take a hand. It was agreed, however, that a strike of the coal miners would have such a far-reaching effect that action by the government to prevent it was absolutely necessary.

Will Serve Long

As Able to Work

(ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH)

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Suffering from an attack of gall stones, complicated by a severe cold, Colonel E.

M. House, confidential adviser to President Wilson and member of the American peace delegation, who arrived here yesterday from France, remained in seclusion at his home today. Colonel House hoped by a week's rest to regain his health sufficiently to be able to go to Washington.

In a brief interview with newspaper men before he went to his home, Colonel House was asked to comment on reports that he planned to sever his connection with diplomatic affairs. He replied:

"That all depends upon my health,

I intend to serve as long as I am physically able."

TRAFFIC TIED UP

BY ANOTHER STRIKE

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—New York's latest strike, that of 11,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, chauffeurs and helpers, tied up the principal railroad terminals of the greater city today.

The chief company affected here is the American Railway Express

Company with its 8,000 employees here. The strikers include a flat increase of $25 a month, an eight hour day and a week's vacation every year.

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Refreshed by an enforced, over-Sunday rest, 49 of the 62 original starters in the army air service trans-continental race lined up early today at controls all the way from Mineola to San Francisco, to take up the trail completed Saturday by Lieutenant Belvin W. Maynard, Major Carl

Spatz and Lieutenant E. C. Kiel, the three race leaders.

Four fliers who entered at San Francisco, started the day today with good prospects of reaching Mineola by night while five of the west bound fliers were within a day's flight, barring accidents of San Francisco.

Those expected at Mineola during the day were Captain Lowell H.

Smith, who spent Sunday at the Rochester, N. Y., control; Lieutenant R. S. Worthington, who held over at Cleveland; Lieutenant H. E.

Queens at Bryan, Ohio, and Major

J. C. Bartholt at Chicago.

Westbound fliers within striking distance of the goal were Captain

H. C. Drayton at Lovelock, Nev.;

Lieutenant J. S. Webster and Captain J. O. Donaldson at Salsboro,

Utah, and Captain Harry Smith and

Lieutenant Earle M. Manzelman at Green River.

YOUNGSTOWN HAS TROUBLE; MILLS AT CANTON STARTINGSenatorial Investigation Completed and

—Chicago Mills Operating.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH)

YOUNGSTOWN, Oct. 13.—Considerable turbulence is reported throughout the valley this morning as the mills resumed operations in greater volume. Crowds of strikers about each plant stoned street cars, and strike-breakers and many arrests have been made. At East

Youngstown an engine struck a hand-car filled with men on their way to work, killing one and seriously injuring two others.

Sheriff Is Mobbed.

A crowd of strike pickets stoned

the automobile occupied by Sheriff

Ben Morris and a number of deputies late Sunday night in Poland avenue, mistaking the sheriff's outfit for a car conveying strike-breakers into the Hazelton plant of the Republic

Iron and Steel Company. A call was issued by the sheriff this morning for 100 men to go to East

Youngstown where pickets were surging about the Youngstown Sheet and Tube gates threatening men returning to work.

Sporadic operations were reported at all the mills this morning. Strike leaders, however, said that the movement had failed as the strikers had stood firm and only a few had returned to work.

A heavy fog made the work of policing the mill districts difficult.

Feeling is Tense.

With the attempt of three companies to resume operations at a number of open hearth furnaces here this morning feeling was more tense than at any time during the last three weeks. It was generally believed that the effort to break the strike was the first real test between the two sides.

Ready to Start.

Officials of the Brier Hill Steel

Company were ready to start two open hearth furnaces, the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, three and the Republic Iron and Steel Company one or more. The Carnegie Steel Company announced that it will make no attempt to operate on a larger scale than during the past week.

WORKING AT CANTON.

CANTON, Oct. 13.—Striking iron ing by the hundreds. About two thousand in all went to work, it is said.

HINES ATTACKS RAILROAD MEN, WARNS WORKERS

Says No Grievances Considered While Men are on Strike.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The railroad administration was notified today that the striking railroad shopmen at Altoona, Pa., would return to work at 3 p. m., today. The strike was local and unauthorized by the union.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Strikes of railroad employees such as that in the Altoona, Pa., yards, of the Pennsylvania railroad were declared today by Director General Hines in "creating the basis for the argument that it is nonsense to deal with labor organizations because they will not obey their own rules and therefore make the orderly handling of business impossible."

The statement by the director general was made in a letter to B. M. Jewell, acting president of the railroad way employees' department of the American Federation of Labor, in regard to the Altoona strike. Mr. Hines reiterated that the railroad administration's policy was that no grievance of railroad employees could be considered while the workers involved remained on strike.

Warns Strikers.
Emphasizing the seriousness of every stoppage of work at the present time when "the railroad administration is straining every nerve to serve the people of this country and the people of Europe," Mr. Hines requested that his warning message be transmitted to the strikers whose unauthorized strike, he declared, was injuring the cause of organized labor as well as the general public.

Gas Pump Engine Is Not Repaired

The engine at West Salem used by the gas company in pumping gas from the wells at Bucyrus, from where it is relayed to this city is still out of commission according to report from the gas company today. A cylinder head was blown out of one of the two large engines used for this purpose Saturday, causing a shortage here, due to the increased amount of gas used during the cold snap.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 13.—(AIR RACE)—Plane No. 37 westbound in the trans-continental airplane race, crashed to earth nine miles from Oconto, Neb., according to a report received here at noon today from the control station at North Platte.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—After a day's rest and with more favorable weather over nearly the entire course, forty army aviators today resumed their flights in the trans-continental aerial derby.

Clear, cold weather with moderate winds was reported from most of the control stations with the exception of those in Nebraska, where today's weather interfered with the schedules of several of the fliers.

Captain Lowell H. Smith, who arrived at Mineola at 10:50 today was the third flier to complete the first of the trip from San Francisco. He left Rochester at 7:40 a. m. and made the trip to Mineola in what is believed to be record time. Two other fliers are expected to reach Mineola before the end of the day. They are:

Lieutenant R. S. Worthington and Lieutenant H. E. Queen, who left Cleveland early this morning on the last leg of their east-bound journey. Captain Harry Drayton left Reno headed for San Francisco early in the day with the indications that he would be the second flier to finish the first half of the trans-continental trip among the westbound contingent.

Others in the westbound group who expected to reach San Francisco today were:

Lieutenant L. S. Webster, Captain I. O. Donaldson and Lieutenant

Eleven westbound fliers left Cleveland early in the day while four others hopped off from Buffalo headed for San Francisco.

Half a dozen fliers passed one another in Chicago during the morning. A dozen fliers were strung out between Chicago and Salt Lake City racing toward the Pacific coast. All the fliers expect to reach their destinations before tomorrow night.

Smith Claims Lead.

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 13.—According to the record in Captain Smith's log book he has beaten Lieutenant Maynard in the trans-continental race. Captain Smith's figures show that he flew from San Francisco to Mineola in 24 hours, 30 minutes, flying time against Lieutenant Maynard's 24 hours, 59 minutes and 48½ seconds from Mineola to San Francisco. Captain Smith's claim to victory will have to be officially verified before a decision is made.

Bryan Hop-Offs.

BRYAN, O., Oct. 13.—Lieutenant J. T. Johnson, Sopwith experimental five left for Chicago at 9:35. Captain R. N. Francis in a Martin bomber took the air at 9:40 for Chicago.

Lieutenant C. L. Osbourne de Havilland 4 arrived at this station from Cleveland at 9:07. Major J. C. P. Bartholomew in a S. E. Five arrived from Chicago at 9:13.

Major Bartholomew took the air for Cleveland at 10:25. Three trans-continental fliers are being held up here for repairs. Lieutenant J. B. Machle de Havilland 4 is detained by a broken propeller. Major A. H. Gikerson de Havilland 4 by a damaged strut and Lieutenant C. L. Osbourne by engine trouble. They will probably get away during the afternoon.

Trying To Beat Parson.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 13.—Expressing confidence in his ability to beat Lieutenant Maynard's time to the Pacific coast in the trans-continental air race, Lieutenant I. V. Beau, Jr., No. 26, landed here from Buffalo at 9:10 a. m. and left for Bryan at 10:25. Lieutenant Beau claims he was seven minutes ahead of Lieutenant Maynard's flying time to Cleveland.

MINEOLA, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Second Lieutenant H. E. Queen, the fourth eastbound aviator to arrive here landed at Roosevelt field at 1:45:11 this afternoon. Lieutenant Queen flew a de Havilland 4 machine and carried Lieutenant L. E. Bishop as a passenger.

The fifth eastbound flier to arrive Lieutenant Robert S. Worthington, landed here at 2:17:07. Lieutenant Worthington piloted a S. E. 5, a single seater, and one of the smallest planes in the race.

BRYAN, O., Oct. 13.—Lieutenant L. V. Beau in a de Havilland 4 landed here from Cleveland at noon and expected to leave as soon as he remedied engine trouble. Major R. L. Maughan in a Spad arrived at 12:56 p. m. and Lieutenant J. B. Machle de Havilland 4 descended at 1:06 p. m. before proceeding to Chicago in the trans-continental air derby.

BRYAN, Oct. 13.—Lieutenant J. G. Williams in a de Havilland 4, arrived at this station from Cleveland at 1:19 this afternoon. Lieutenant R. L. Maughan, driving a Spad, took the air for Chicago at 1:45 and Lieutenant L. V. Beau, de Havilland 4, got away for Chicago at 1:50.

Old Model Safe Proved Easy Pickings For Expert.

Yeggmen opened the safe of A. Pelligrini, proprietor of a fruit store at 235 north Central avenue, sometime Saturday night, and obtained over $800, according to report made police Sunday. Pelligrini charges, the combination of the safe had been worked, and that so far as he knows, the combination was only known to himself and his brother, Frank Pelligrini, who assists him in the store. The safe, however, is an old model that would probably not have been particularly difficult for an expert to open.

Pelligrini, according to his report, left the store about 8 o'clock Saturday night and the robbery was discovered when he returned to the store early Sunday morning. He avers the door of the safe was slightly ajar, and that a cigar box, a tin box and a bag in which the money had been kept were thrown under the counter in front of the safe.

Pelligrini says his brother, Dante Pelligrini, who runs a fruit store near the market house left $300 in bills and $200 in gold in the safe, for safe keeping, in addition to his own money, making a total of about $800.

Entrance was gained according to Pelligrini, by forcing a window open in a small back room of the cellar. This window had been closed when the police arrived and there were no traces of any disturbance to the ground outside the window, police claim.

Will Distribute Health Bulletins

A letter has been received by Superintendent C. A. Arganbright from Hon. B. F. Welty, congressman from the fourth Ohio district, Washington, stating that congress has on hand a number of small health bulletins, which are to be sent upon request to the county school superintendents. The bulletins which are of particular interest to parents and teachers, are limited in number. Superintendent Arganbright will send in his request for a certain number this week. The bulletins are issued by the government, to help in preventing the spread of so many diseases throughout the schools.

Do you know that languidness, that "tired feeling," nervousness, lame or weak back, stiff or swollen joints, rheumatic pains, lumbago, in the great majority of cases, indicate kidney trouble?

Foley Kidney Pills

Mrs. Robert Blair, 461 S. 20th Street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "I suffered two years with kidney and bladder trouble frequently getting backache. Mornings I would arise feeling very tired and having headaches, and see bright streaks before my eyes." I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to try them. After taking them a few weeks I found my kidneys were restored to healthy, normal action. I am also free of those tired spells and backache and no longer worried. My recovery is entirely due to Foley Kidney Pills, which I gladly recommend. Sold by H. P. Fortkamp drug store and all other druggists.

Strict Government Control or Absolute Prohibition Only Possibilities.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Britain must choose between strict government control of the liquor traffic or absolute prohibition, in the opinion of Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the Liquor Control Board. "If the question is considered broadly there are only two policies, control or prohibition," said Lord D'Abernon. "Reversion to the old pre-war conditions would mean drunkenness, inefficiency, ill-health, disease and the misery which has notoriously resulted from drunken habits in the past."

"I believe that control is possible. The experience of the war shows that temperance and efficiency can be obtained by regulation. I believe the liquor trade is susceptible to reform. Recent declarations by leaders in the trade, appear to me to warrant the belief that the new school in the brewing trade is gaining a hearing, and that they have realized that the old methods of the anti-reform whole-hog indulgence advocates are no longer suitable to modern conditions. The same change is in evidence among licensed victuallers. I set many letters from them urging that there be no return to the old hours, during which their work lasted, 17 hours instead of six daily and when the conditions for public house servants were a scandal."

"There can be no doubt that the position of licensees is enormously better than before the war. They work shorter hours, they have not the same difficulty with drunkenness and they certainly do not make less money."

Questions Right of Banks to Help Campaign Funds

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13.—The Ohio Home Protective League, an organization opposing adoption of the classification amendment today challenged the right of banks in Ohio to contribute to the campaign fund of either those favoring or opposing the classification amendment when an opinion was asked of Attorney General Price on the subject. It was explained by Taber that it became necessary to ask for an opinion when the league came into possession of the letter written by the Cleveland Clearing House Association asking Cleveland banks to raise $50,000 for the campaign fund of the Ohio Taxpayers' League, an organization favoring classification.

W. U. Attaches Get Increase

Although no official notification has been received at the local telegraph office by Manager Ogilvie, an announcement made Saturday at New York states that all employees of the Western Union Telegraph company were to receive pay increases of 10 to 15 per cent. This new rate will go into effect on January 1, 1920.

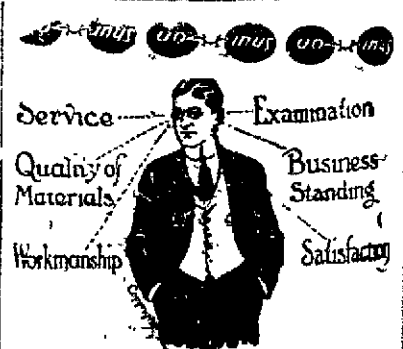

The 15 per cent. raise affects those who have been in the employ of the company more than a year, and the 10 per cent. to those who have been working six months or more.

The convention will come to a close on Wednesday night. Informal discussions representing the attitude of the press and general public in laying the blame for the high cost of food prices at the door of the grocers' associations, held the floor this morning. It is said that George J. Schaefer of Cleveland, president of the association and J. R. Truesdale of Newark, Ohio, secretary, will not permit their names to come up for re-election. Production and Prices

NO argument should be necessary as to the soundness of the statement lately issued by the council of national defense ascribing the high cost of living largely to a serious drop in production. While the statement also emphasizes the prevalence of profiteering, "intentional and unintentional," it is obvious that a slump in production of necessities, even without interference with the natural law of trade, inexorably raises the cost of necessities. A shortage of supply, whether natural or artificially created, gives the profiteer his chance. And even the profiteering rests in a large measure on what might be called a "psychological condition"—that is, a general belief that living necessities must be very high—a real or imaginary lack in certain lines of supply makes the consumer a readier victim to the extortionist.

Whether or not the council's report was intended as a timely reminder to labor of its responsibilities in the present industrial crisis, it should serve that purpose. The chief complaint against high prices has come from labor. The railway brotherhoods, in fact, went so far as to express a preference for a reduction in living cost to an advance in wages, on the plea that wage advances mean nothing so long as prices continue their skyward trend. It is a self-evident fact that if labor limits production to the point of creating a shortage of necessities—whether by reasonably short hours, deliberate curtailment of output under present hours or by protracted strikes—labor itself must reap the consequences in the form of advanced prices.

The farmer, it might be said, can hardly be considered amenable to the council's admonition. For the farmer, of all producers, has not laid down on the job; he has neither struck nor shortened his hours, and under the spur of war's necessities has vastly increased his output. The farmer may reasonably retort to the request for increased production by asking what it shall profit either him or the consumer if he produce more, so long as the middlemen hoard away his output or extract from it an unreasonable profit with impunity. So far as food prices are concerned, the farmer needs no incentive to increased production except a guarantee that he, and not the middleman, shall make the real profit.

In the other products of labor, however, such as clothes, shoes, furniture, building materials and the like, it is obvious that production has been seriously handicapped, by voluntary and involuntary acts of labor, as well as by the disarrangement of industrial life by war. Hundreds of factories and incalculable quantities of raw materials have been diverted during the past few years from the making of war necessities to the making of war materials; it will be some time yet before many of these factories will resume their old lines—and some of them never will do so.

Labor, naturally enough, has had to undergo readjustments to meet this change in output, thousands of men who were productive in one line are not adapted to production in another. This shifting of occupations has inevitably produced industrial restlessness and uncertainty. There is hardly a single line of industry that has not within the past year experienced either strikes or lockouts on a large scale. Without discussing the justice or injustice of these strikes and lockouts, it is apparent that they have cut down the output of essential commodities. Add to this the fact that there are still more than a half million men in military service abroad and that thousands of alien laborers have returned to Europe and it will be seen what a serious deficit there is in production.

The government is now undertaking—not as effectively as might be, owing to the backwardness of petty politics and the senatorial delay in connection with the peace treaty—to deal with the profiteer. It is up to both labor and capital to supplement this action by stimulated production. All the legislation in the world will not make prices lower as the production of necessities falls far short of the demand for them.

They Will Come Back

BERNARD VON DEM BÜSCHE HADDENHAUSEN, former minister to Argentina, says the Germans will come back—which is nothing new in the way of prophecy. Neither is it anything new in the way of history. It is predicted by many others that the Germans will "come back," just as it is shown in history they have been "coming back" for a thousand years. But what of it? It simply means another licking for them and it may be God's way of preventing the German's from overrunning the earth. If they hadn't tried to "come back" they would long ago have ruled the world.

That is to say, if the Germans had not tried to rule the world with arms, they might easily have ruled it otherwise. They were getting in a fair way to dominate when they made war—and were set back for fifty years. Had the Germans gone about their way, industrially, for another matter of a century the world would have been dependent upon them; they could easily have accomplished by peace what they failed to accomplish by war.

There is no occasion for alarm at the gentleman's statement that Germany will come back. The rest of the nations will also come back. France will come back; Great Britain will come back; the United States is "already back." So if Germany wants to "come back" in a military way, let her try it, and whenever she desires. If she couldn't win four years ago, why should any one believe that she can ever win? She certainly had a "devastating advantage" when she started the war—a greater advantage than she will ever again be allowed to gain. So whenever she gets ready to "come back" on with the dance! She may wreck the house, but she will never be able to capture it and turn it to her own use. Germany's chance of dominating the world is lost forever, but there is nothing to prevent her trying to "come back" whenever she wants to do so.

GOOD EVENING—With bay rum being put to a new use by the guys who can drink it or leave it alone, the barbers are tuning up their customers now with some new tonic with the semi-polite order.

The poet sings of "the soft brightness which is your soul," but from our recent experiences we whine about the "thin paperiness which is our soul."

It seems to be a pretty general rule that the soldier boy who did the most fighting over in France does the least talking about it back home.

HAPPY THOUGHT: There may be something in this theory that man descended from the ape, and now and then you find one that seems to have descended a good ways.

The Times' Family Doctor

WHY YOU SHOULD GET LOTS OF FRESH AIR EVEN ON COLD DAYS

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (John Hopkins University)

Fire will not burn without air, milk before bedtime.

Air means oxygen. Life, like light, comes from fire. That is to say, living depends upon oxygen. Air must be at hand or you cease to breathe. Moreover, if the air lacks enough oxygen, it is not truly air, but a gas and, indeed, a poisonous gas at that. Therefore, air means life. It follows, therefore, the fact that when the breezes blow and the winds give vent to coolness, dryness and motion in a fresh atmosphere, health and vigor are encouraged.

The real essence of pure air is less an absence of poisons than the presence of dryness and movement. When, however, Old Boreas does not give vent to his pure draughts, carbonic acid gas, moisture, warmth and other vitiated blasts cause ill-health, pallor, anemia, lassitude and a deficient earning power. Ventilation, then, means giving vent to your best energies. It is as necessary as sunlight, food and drink. Ill indeed blows the wind that profits nobody. Even the cold, cracked, tumble-down walls of a woodman's cottage have their virtues.

Fireplace Ventilation
A window lowered two inches from the top will ventilate a room more efficaciously and more safely than twice as much space at the bottom. An open grate fire so beautiful and so common in ancient homes and old English houses is also a very effective means of ventilation. The hot air of the fireplace when the flames are dancing up the flue carry all the foul air with their own mad rush up the chimney. Even when the weather is warm or mild, an open fire in a hearth is a great tonic stimulant. Therefore, a fireplace should never be closed or blocked. To stand an oil stove or a few candles in it acts as a suction cylinder to send the bad air up the chimney.

In frigid weather it is not always pleasant during the day to keep the windows open long. A false, concave window-sill about two inches in height below and another about two inches from the top of the window is a superior ventilator and it also shields you from icy blasts.

Fresh Air Vital
At night covered as you are with many comforters and blankets, the windows should be wide open. Doors are very poor ventilators. They permit dirty, breathed and vitiated atmospheres to enter. Even the cracks and edges of doors should be covered with some sort of protective strips.

Foul air and ill-smelling atmospheres should never be disguised by burning incense or punk or atomizing the room with cologne, perfumes or rosewater. Instead, light a fire in the open hearth or place a lighted lamp in the chimney, place and avoid all causes of such odors, open wide the windows and soon the foul air will be replaced by fresh invigorating atmosphere.

THE OHIO CANAL CENTENNIAL
Ohio is closely approaching the centennial of her canal enterprise, but so disastrously has it resulted in these latter days that it may be passed without formal observance. It may be said that the agitation in favor of undertaking the construction of a state system of canals reached its climax in 1820—one hundred years ago next year. The legislative steps necessary were soon afterward taken, surveys made and contracts let.

It was not until five years later, however, that construction operations were begun. For some reason the summit in Licking county, near Newark, was selected as the place where the formal opening of the work should be held and July 4, 1825, was the date. The state authorities had called to their aid in planning the work some of the engineers employed on the great Erie canal in New York state, and naturally it was decided to invite Governor De Witt Clinton, a man of nation-wide reputation on the subject of canalization, to be present and deliver an address.

He accepted, and had also the honor of removing the first shovelful of earth on that occasion. He came by lake vessel to Cleveland and there he was met by a reception committee of state officials and escorted to the Licking summit. The passage from Cleveland to Newark, was made, by stage coach, the only inland means of travel in that day.

The state has now interested the federal government in a project to construct a real canal—large enough to float barges from the lake to the river, and surveys will probably be ordered soon. Probably the most fitting celebration of the Ohio canal centennial would be the opening of work on the new proposal canal with a view to securing a means of transportation that would not be a rival of the railroad which put the old-time canals out of business, but a valuable adjunct to that transportation system, to help out when it is put to test, as it was during the strenuous preparations for the war, two years ago.

An East Indian scientist has invented a machine which he contends proves that plants feel pain by recording their nerve shocks and reaction.

Short Stories of the Buckeye State

After Como had shown Jack and Jane everything of interest on his father's farm he took them to a neighbor's place. There the children were surprised to find, instead of more and more grapevines, fields of wheat.

"The hats your Mother and Ladydear wear next year may have some of the straw from that wheat in it," said Como as he stood at the edge of one of the fields. Then he told the children how, in the northern part of Italy, many acres of wheat are grown just to obtain the straw. This is considered the finest hat straw in the world and if you'll ask your mother or sisters if they ever heard of Milan, Leghorn or Tuscany straw they'll tell you yes, I'm sure.

The straw is cut when it is just about half ripe and is left on the ground until it is dry. Then it is cut into certain lengths and the different sizes of straws are separated and put in piles. These different sizes of straw are used to make many kinds of braid, for the straw is braided before it is made into hats.

When the hat makers want to use the straw they soak it in water until it becomes very soft and does not break when bent. Then they braid three, or four, or five straws at once into a long braid.

Although the children were greatly interested in the grape vineyards and the straw, they hadn't forgotten what the Widow Aar had said about the silkworms. So their curiosity finally got the better of them, as it does with little folks quite often, and Jane said:

"Does anyone near here grow silkworms?"

"Not very near, but in your wonderful airplane we could go to a place, where they raise them, in a very short while," said Como. So, after Jack and Jane had told Captain Brave and Ladydear what Como had said it was arranged that he would go with them to the home of a friend, a hundred or more miles away, where the children could see the busy little worms that make possible all the pretty silk dresses that the girls and ladies wear, and the silk hats that the boys and men folk have. But they had to wait a day or two until Como could finish some work in the vineyards.

Of course the children were spending most of their time in the vineyards with their new-found friends, eating their fill of the delicious fruit, but Ladydear didn't allow them to neglect their lessons. Every morning during the week Jack and Jane recited their lessons to her in some spot the children would choose, and they would spend an hour or more studying. The words she gave them were ones connected with things they had seen, which made them much easier to learn. But Booh had tired of school entirely and now "played hooky" every day. And that wasn't all. Every now and then he would interrupt Jack or Jane while they were reciting their lessons by playfully rushing into the "school room" and jumping up on them. Then, once in a while, he would poke his head around some corner nearby and look at them in such a clownish fashion that one or the other would have to laugh right out in class. Which, if you don't know now, you little folks will find out some time, is a very serious matter. Copyright, 1919.

Lima District News Gathered for Our Neighbors

ST. MARYS

LUTHERAN SYNOD AGAINST INNOVATION

ST. MARYS, Oct. 13.—Interest in the sessions of the Lutheran District Synod continues unabated. The session continued the discussion of the paper "Innovations," which had been taken up the evening previous.

In discussing the introduction of the individual communion cup in the celebration of the Lord's Supper, it was shown that the arguments which were usually brought forward in support of this innovation, were not conclusive. Previous to the war, an inquiry was made among some of the most prominent doctors of Germany, Switzerland, Norway and England, and they were unanimous in reporting that in all of their practice they had never had under their observation, a single case of disease traceable to the communion cup in the Lord's Supper.

The use of grape juice at the Lord's supper in the place of wine was condemned as an innovation contrary to the scripture. The best commentators are agreed that wine was the element selected in the institution of the sacrament, and to change the element would call into question the Sacrament itself.

Observing his seventy-first birthday anniversary, which falls today, Saturday, October 11, 1919, Joseph Dowty, at his place of residence south of St. Marys, was the subject Friday evening of a surprise by members of the St. Marys-New Bremen Road Shredders' Association and their families.

Well laden with cooked chicken and other delicacies, entirely unexpected to Mr. Dowty, his friends came on in force. An evening of real enjoyment extending till 1 a. m. Saturday, is reported.

Roma McCabe, manager of the Grand Theater in this city, was called to Mt. Pleasant, Mich., today noon, by a message announcing the death, this morning, Saturday, October 11, 1919, of his brother, Bryan McCabe, aged 24 years.

The telegram failed to state the cause of the young man's death, but Mr. McCabe was inclined to believe it an accident of some sort, as he had received no previous announcement of his brother having been ill. Bryan McCabe was employed in a garage at Mt. Pleasant.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE LAUNCH DRIVE FOR BIGGER GYMNASIUM

BLUFFTON.—The Athletic Association of Bluffton College, backed by the students has launched a drive for $2,500 for the enlarging of the College Gymnasium and the building of a running track.

The entire student body is divided into two bodies, the Purples and the Whites by Coach Schumacker and Prof. Berkley, respect. Each leader has 10 captains and in this manner jewelry is encouraged. The losing team or the one raising the least money is to give a feed to the winners at the close of the campaign.

The need of a larger gymnasium will be readily appreciated by those Lima people who attended the tournament held last March. Such a gymnasium is a distinct asset to the community and the building fund should be liberally subscribed to. Subscriptions sent to Prof. Berkley will be promptly acknowledged.

OTTAWA

WEATHER STOPS OTTAWA FAIR

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—Because of inclement weather, the big Putnam county fair was not a success, financially. Everything that could make for a successful fair, in the way of exhibits, privilege men, side shows, fortune tellers, novelty entertainments and etc., were there. The agricultural exhibits were never so complete or of such a high class order; but the weatherman was most ungracious. Thursday, the races were on, the track dried by automobiles. Friday and Saturday, heavy rains made racing impossible. The gate receipts, Friday, were about an average. Thursday was free day for children and soldiers. While the crowd was very large, gate receipts were not. The receipts Wednesday were over $300, Thursday, $200, Friday, $375. Saturday was given over to removal of exhibits. It is usually a big day, but the rain and mud did much damage, by way of gate receipts.

VAN WERT

CRAZY STRANGERS VISIT VAN WERT CO.

VAN WERT, Oct. 13.—The stranger who was picked up in Ridge township, several weeks ago and made a prisoner at the county jail, was given another hearing in Probate court, Friday afternoon, with the result that Dr. C. G. Church and Dr. F. P. Kreider declared him of sound mind. Judge Bulyeat remanded him to jail, where he is being held pending further developments. The fellow claims to not know his identity nor his place of residence, although he talks clearly on other subjects. It is believed that he hails from Wisconsin.

A foreigner, a stranger in this county, has been made a prisoner at the county jail, having been picked up in Harrison township, where he wandered aimlessly in the neighborhood of the home of J. B. Germann. The unfortunate fellow is apparently a Roumanian, aged about 34 years, with very reddish complexion. He is possessed of a desire to return to the place of his nativity and entertains an expressed fear that he will be taken to Ohio.

Several days ago Elmer Smalley, residing northwest of Ohio City, went to Michigan to look after some land and to purchase his winter's supply of apples and potatoes. While he was gone his oldest son, Carl, aged 18, left home and since then nothing has been heard from him. He left his work clothes. It was at first thought he had went to one of the naval recruiting stations and had enlisted in the navy, but inquiry has failed to substantiate this belief. His father gave him an interest in the corn crop. Any information regarding him will be gladly received by Mr. Smalley.

Rockford was the winner in a gun club shoot with Ohio City. Three men teams participated, shooting seventy-five targets each, with the following result in the grand totals: Rockford, 190, Ohio City, 168.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. DELPHOS

CONFIRM 170 AT ST. JOHNS, DELPHOS

DELPHOS, O., Oct. 13.—A class of about one hundred and seventy, one hundred and fifty-four of whom were children, were confirmed by Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of the Toledo diocese at St. John's Catholic church Sunday morning.

A solemn High Mass was sung at 10 o'clock were Rev. Fr. Burhart was the celebrant, Rev. Fr. Simon Barr, of New Riegel, deacon, and Rev. Fr. Rupert, sub deacon.

Letters received from the officials of the American Road Machinery company dealt with the provisions of the lease and contract which are to be arranged for the location of the addition to their plant in this city.

In these communications, the company confirmed the agreement with regard to the erection of a building to cost at least $10,000 on the park ground. By this provision, the company will be required to erect this building within the next ten years and to keep buildings to that value on the ground in order to retain their lease.

T. B. Wagoner underwent an examination at the Lima city hospital Friday to determine the nature of a foreign growth on the neck, and to learn whether an operation would be necessary. It was found to be a goitre with an abscess and the physicians advised against an operation at this time. It may be necessary to operate later but it is hoped that this may be avoided.

CELINA

BALD EAGLE IS TAKEN NEAR CELINA

CELINA, Oct. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hess, of Lima, spent the week-end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hess, west of town. Mrs. Hess, who has been confined to her home for the past two months with muscular rheumatism, is very much improved and able to be about again.

The eagle which L. I. Hamilton caught at Edgewater Park Friday morning, has turned out to be a young bald eagle, and is said by those familiar with the species to be a little less than a year old. According to the legend of the legend he was released at Carson City, Michigan, in June of the past summer. He seems to be quite docile since being caged, and not crippled, as at first supposed.

The work of cutting and husking corn had proceeded without let or hindrance until Friday's downpour followed by continuous rain on Saturday flooded the fields and suspended operations. Thus far the gigantic 1919 corn crop had gone on to successive stages of maturity without a single adverse condition pending the delay, due to the rain, of cribbing that which now lies husked in the fields.

WAPAKONETA

WAPAK OFFICIALS AFTER AUTOISTS

WAPAKONETA, Oct. 13.—So many complaints have come to the office of the Sheriff, the Prosecuting Attorney and the County Commissioners, concerning violations of the law by motorists in the matter of failure to dim the headlights of the machines and the improper use of spotlights when passing other machines on the road on dark nights, that the Sheriff has been instructed to arrest all parties guilty of such infraction of the law.

Sheriff Hinton stated Saturday that his instructions are to the point and that upon view or complaint arrests will be made. The conditions have become most pernicious, it is stated, and those who obey the law and dim their headlights when meeting another car on the highway at night, are very much incensed over the actions of others.

in the Williamson school building by those who are trying out for the city team. Seven reported for practice Friday night, and it is said that next Wednesday night a team will be selected.

The sorrowful feature about this season's city basketball team in Wapakoneta is the fact that no games will be played here with teams from other towns, for it is impossible to find a suitable building wherein to play. There is some fine material this year from which to select a team, but it is hardly likely that Wapakoneta folks will have a chance to see them perform on a local floor.

While out hunting near Waynesfield, Perry Stimmel brought down a mallard duck wearing an aluminum band on each leg, bearing the name of H. S. Osler, 801 Dominion Band Building, Toronto, Canada, No. 37932, and dated Oct. 10, 1918.

Wapakoneta Council Knights of Columbus initiated nearly one hundred candidates Sunday. The first degree was exemplified by Sidney Council, at the Moose lodge rooms, and at 10 a. m. the candidates and Knights attended high mass at St. Joseph church, with the pastor, the Rev. The second degree work began at 1:30 p. m., at the Moose lodge rooms to be exemplified by Wapakoneta Council, assisted by P. J. Kirwan of London, Ohio. The third degree was put on by Hon. T. J. Duffy and staff of Columbus. At 6:30 p. m. a banquet and toasts were given at St. Joseph school hall, at Pearl and Blackfoot streets, with Hon. I. H. Goetz as toastmaster.

HOGAN FOR CLASSIFICATION.

Editor Times:—
I intend to vote for the amendment for the classification of property for taxation. The state of Kentucky recently provided for this plan of taxation, and authentic reports of the results show a largely increased return from personal property such as money, stocks and bonds. The percentage of increase of returns from personal property as compared with realty is quite striking.

I have no ax of my own to grind except a desire to see the tax rate on realty as low as possible. Ninety per cent of the taxes I pay are on real estate, and, therefore, the writer could have no motive except the general good first and personal benefit second. The old plan of taxation of personal property has proven a great failure, and it would seem impossible, apparently, to devise a poorer law than the present one in force. The classification plan appears to be the only one giving any hope to the tax-payers.

There appears to be no reason why the farmers should be hurt by classification. The people to be chiefly affected by classification, as I see it, are those in the city, and if the result of it will be as it appears to have been where tried—an increased revenue for cities and greater payment of taxes by those who have intangible property—the cities will be benefited and the rural districts not injured, with the probabilities all in favor of the rural districts being substantially benefited. This article is not written with any desire for controversy, but solely to create a greater interest in the question and particularly to suggest for

NEW WORK FOR WOMEN

A wide field of opportunity for women lies in the new profession of "occupational therapy." This simply means providing constructive work for hospital patients during convalescence, according to T. B. Kidner, the vocational expert loaned to this country by Canada to assist in the problem of rehabilitating disabled soldiers. Mr. Kidner has recently assumed charge of the work of the National Tuberculosis Association in rehabilitating tuberculous people.

"The object of this training," he said, "is to provide a link from a patient's helpless condition to the point where he can earn a living when his strength has completely returned, even though he cannot return to his old occupation by reason of his handicap."

"State and federal authorities are to the needs of this kind of work. Wisconsin has already passed a law whereby occupational therapy is made compulsory in state hospitals. In some states this is under consideration. Persons disabled in industry.

"Womanly patience, sympathy and tact will go a long way in working out the problems of the individual patient. It is a new field of service, and one in which the demands for workers are far greater than the supply."

"Occupational therapy" is closely related to the building of hospitals and sanatoriums. It is to aid in the provision of additional facilities of this nature that the National Tuberculosis Association this year seeks a working fund of more than $5,000,000 through the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals.

A Chance to Live

THE WAR HELPS

The war in its on-sweep of preparation flung out two wavelets of aid to the Carrolls.

One of our men is leaving for camp and Arklight on a certain early autumn day to his assistant shipping clerk. "I'm going to move you up, Carroll. You've done well. I think you can swing Phillips's job on western shipments. Try it a week. If you make out all right the pay'll be fifteen."

Ann, answering an advertisement that offered half time work to chocolate makers on war boxes, found she could earn four and a half dollars a week in the candy factory three blocks away working from nine to twelve.

When she heard Bernice's step on the stairs she rushed out to tell her now. He rushed in to tell her and they collided in a sort of extended hug.

They buried the good luck in a single breath.

"Nineteen-fifty!" they chorused, "Nineteen-fifty!" And they did a little dance around the table.

"Bernie—how do your toes feel?"

"My toes? What do you mean, my toes?"

Bernard Carroll—"Annie held up an urging finger, 'don't your toes feel as though they were gripping the first rung of the ladder?'"

It troubles never come singly, perhaps prosperities do not either. The tide ebbs, and it flows again. It seemed to Annie that from the day she found her short hour job at the candy factory, she could feel hope surging slowly toward her like a great wave that starts far out at sea.

It began with the chocolate money. It gathered strength with Bernard's moving road in Phillips's job, which he could not have done but for his smelting summer of study; it became lavishly visible at the culmination of a certain dance in the Hargan family. And it broke in shattering white beauty upon Annie's shore one day as she walked commonplace upon the street with her children.

The chocolate money, small as it was, gave the Carroll's a little more life. It relaxed the vicious grip of their poverty. A rich man would have laughed—maybe he would have sighed—to see what Annie did with that four dollars, and a half! The wolves she banished the

LIV—A CRITICAL SITUATION

At breakfast next morning I seized the papers eagerly before Paul had opened them and scanned the list of survivors of the Corinthia. Captain Chiswold's name was not among them and further down the page was a small paragraph assigning him to the U-boat's victims and reviewing in brief his activities in the Royal Flying Corps, etc.

I pointed it out to Paul in silence.

"Jove, that's a shame! He was an awfully decent chap, too good for a fate like that," was his comment. "How about his wife? Do you suppose she's provided for?"

"I hardly know. He was a younger son in the Chiswold family and I doubt if he had much more than his Flying Corps pay. I must write to Violet, though I strongly suspect that she's not very heart-broken."

"What makes you think that?" I leaned over and patted his hand patronizingly.

"There are many things, dear, that you men can never understand."

"You're darned right there are!" Paul agreed warmly. "But why so mysterious about this Violet Chiswold?"

Harry Agarter, of Indianapolis, spent the week-end with friends here.

The Daffodil Club will meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Maud Dennis, of East Elm Street.

TODAY—"THE WHITE COMPANY," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
TUESDAY—"LITTLE DORRIT," by Dickens.

DOYLE II.

A CHARACTERISTIC ATTITUDE OF THE AUTHOR

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is known everywhere and to everybody as the creator of Sherlock Holmes. He has naturally been pleased with this world-wide fame, but it has not been an unmixed pleasure. He once said that he wished America might have taken a little less eagerly to the detective tales and evidenced an equal enthusiasm for his historical romances, which he regards as his best work. He remarked that he had spent two years of hard work and had consulted more than 200 books in composing "The White Company."

The numerous Sherlock Holmes tales and the historical romances show but two sides to the author's unusual versatility. He has always kept up his keen interest in medicine, his first profession. In "The Crime of the Congo" he wrote about the cruelties of King Leopold's administration of the Congo rubber traffic in South Africa, and more recently in France, he has studied and written about modern war. Long before the great war overwhelmed Europe he saw the storm cloud gathering and in short stories he forecast some of the terrors and marvels of war as it might be and as it proved to be. In "Great Britain and the Next War," in 1913, he exposed the specious arguments of General Bernhardi.

For 30 years he has been investigating Spiritualism, starting as a convinced unbeliever. More and more he has been won over to complete faith in communications from the spirit world, and in numerous articles and "The New Revelation" (1918) he has set down the story of his progress from scepticism to belief, and is now playing a prominent part in the great spiritualistic movement which is sweeping over England.

THE WHITE COMPANY

By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

(Condensation by A. J. Stafford, Wollaston, Mass.)

The Abbot of Beaulieu sat in a lofty room, before him his thirty monks. All were labor-stained and weary, for the abbot was a hard man. A big red-haired youth, the black sheep of the fold, stood awaiting punishment. His sins were many, the worst being that he had "conversed with a maiden—and did carry her across a stream, to the infinite relief of the devil."

The abbot rose in wrath. "John of Hordle!" he thundered. "Thou shalt be cast into the outer world! Seize him and scourge him from the precincts!"

But the culprit had different plans. Lifting the big oaken desk he hurled it at his accusers, sprang through the open door and escaped. "He is possessed of a devil!" they shouted.

Far different was the leave-taking of Alleyne Edricson, a slender, yellow-haired youth, favorite of all. "Twenty years ago," said the abbot, "your father, the Franklin of Minstead, died leaving to the abbey three hides of land, and you, his infant son, for us to rear until you reached man's estate, and now you must return into the world."

Alleyne was a learned clerk, skilled in music, writing, painting and other attainments. His reading was scant and he had only a vague idea of Europe beyond which were "Jerusalem, the Holy Land and the great river which bath its source in the Garden of Eden." The abbot now told him of strange nations, including that of the fair but evil women who slay with beholding, like the basilisk. After many prayers, blessings and warnings from the abbot against sin and the names of women, Alleyne left the peaceful abbey and went out into the world. And he found it a fearful place.

His only relative was a brother, now Soeman of Minstead, who had earned an evil name. Alleyne decided to go to his brother and try to reform him. On the way he was set upon by robbers and would have been killed had not the bailiff appeared. He was then made sick by seeing one robber shot and the other decapitated. Night found him with a host of robbers at the Pied Merlin, kept by Dame Eliza. His clerkly ways got him into trouble, but big Hordle John protected him. Samkin Aylward, a hawman of the White Company, came in with rich booty from France. He induced John to enlist for the wars, and in the morning they started for Castle Twynham, held by the famous knight, Sir Nigel Loring, who was to command the White Company.

Alleyne set out to find his brother. In a forest he came upon the most beautiful creature he had ever beheld. Such he had pictured angels. She was being held against her will by a big yellow-haired man. Alleyne came to the girl's assistance and found that the man was his brother.

"Young cub of Beaulieu! My doas shall be set upon you!" cried the Soeman. But he was unarmed, and Alleyne, raising his iron-shod staff, compelled him to free the girl. He ran for weapons and dogs, but the other two escaped through the woods. The girl's name came with horses, and when the young clerk told her that he intended to join two friends at Castle Twynham she laughed and rode away without telling her name. Long he stood, hoping she might return. Then he turned away, no longer a light-hearted boy.

At Twynham castle Alleyne met his angel again. She was the Loring's only child. He became squire to Sir Nigel, while Lady Loring engaged him to teach the wayward Maude and two other girls. Maude was no easy pupil, giving to strange moods in spite of the abbot's warning, teaching three girls was to Alleyne a joyous experience.

Time came for him to follow Sir Nigel to the wars. Maude was far above him in station, yet he told her of his love and begged her for some word of hope.

"With my father's love and all may follow," she told him.

Sir Nigel was a small man with a lisping voice, but when he said, "let us debate the matter further," it meant a fight. He spoke of his "small deeds," and he called a deadly hand-to-hand fight a "small bickering." With Alleyne, John Aylward, and one hundred fifty archers and men-at-arms he set sail for France. They fought a bloody battle with two pirate craft. Alleyne had his first taste of war and fought bravely. Sir Nigel's sword flashed everywhere at once. Aylward led the archers and John took the big Norman captain prisoner by sheer strength. They lost nearly all their men but captured both pirate ships. In a fast sailing ship they landed at Bordeaux where King Edward was mustering his forces to carry the war into Spain. Here Alleyne fought a duel and came out a hero. Five English Knights held the list against all comers. The English won two bouts, their opponents two, and Sir Nigel won the fifth. Then an unknown knight came forth from the east and challenged the victors. Four knights went down before him in short order, but Sir Nigel broke even.

The White Company was at Dax and he set out to take command. With him were Aylward and John and his two squires, Alleyne and Forc. In the brushwood they saw many strange lean people who fled before them. Some were too weak with hunger to move. Their feudal lord had taken the last fruits of their toil. At a hotel they found the strange champion of the tournament. He was Du Guesclin, a French knight, known to Sir Nigel. His wife, Lady Tiphaine was with him. They all went for the night to a chateau. Here they found several other knights and squires. They had a great feast and made merry, unmindful of the starving peasants.

Lady Tiphaine went into a trance, which she called the blessed hour of sight. She saw the English driven out of France, but the power of England spread to many lands. She saw Sir Nigel's castle besieged by a mob led by a big yellow-haired man, Lady Loring and Maude stood on the wall, directing the defenders. The big leader was slain and his followers dispersed. She told her husband that he also was in great danger, but he laughed at the idea.

When all were asleep the enraged peasants stole into the chateau and murdered all but eight. Sir Nigel, Alleyne, Aylward, John, Du Guesclin and his wife, and two others fought their way to the keep. In a narrow passage at the head of the stairs they held the mob off. The peasants set fire to the buildings. The stairs fell away and they were about to be enveloped in flames when the White Company arrived and rescued them.

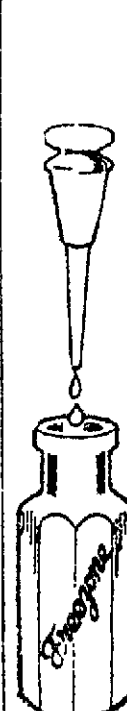

Sir Nigel and the White Company, four hundred strong, joined Edward's army and marched into Spain. Sent ahead to reconnoiter, they stole upon a Spanish camp and did some small deeds. Hordle John captured a Spanish knight by the foot and held him for a ransom. Later, they were surprised by a large force of cavalry. On a rocky hill they made their last stand.

"To your arms, men!" roared Sir Nigel. "Shoot while you may, and then out swords and let us live or die together."

Sir Nigel sent Alleyne for help. Soresly wounded he lashed himself to his horse, broke through the

A Drop On a Touchy Corn

Instant relief! Then corn on callus lifts off with fingers

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without one twinge of pain. A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it Freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of Freezone for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off. Freezone is wonderful! It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the skin. Hard corns, soft corns, or corns-between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. Women should keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn ache twice.

Spanish lines and, nearly dead, reached the English. When the rescue party arrived and drove away the Spaniards the flag still waved, with only John and six archers around it. All the rest were either killed or taken prisoner.

The fame of the White Company travelled far. Alleyne was knighted, John got five thousand crowns ransom, and the two hurried back to England. Maude Loring, hearing that every one of the company had been killed had entered a nunnery, but Alleyne took her home and they were married.

Sir Nigel and Aylward were taken prisoners but escaped, seized a small schooner and came home with a rich cargo. Aylward wed the dame Eliza, John became Alleyne's squire, and they all lived many years filled with honor and happiness and laden with every blessing.

Sir Nigel rode no more to the wars, but he found his way to every jousting within thirty miles. Twice again Sir Alleyne Edricson fought in France, and came back each time laden with honors.

The Power of "The Miracle Man"

George Loane Tucker's Production of the Frank L. Packard Story for the Paramount-Artcraft at the Faurot Puts the Picture Among the Finest Examples of Screen Drama.

FAUROT

There is more than one miracle of the deaf and dumb healer over performed in George Loane Tucker's production of "The Miracle Man," the story as presented on the screen at the Faurot Sunday, having the power to sway the emotions of the spectator with the compelling force overlooks every other quality: its power to work its will with the beholder. Neither as a piece of dramatic construction nor as a presentation of unusual phases of life that square with cold reason is it exempt from error, but these conditions have little, if any, effect upon the firm hold of its emotional appeal; and it is another potent demonstration that human interest is the keystone of all forms of dramatic fiction.

George Loane Tucker's Double Triumph

As the adapter of the story to the screen as well as the director of "The Miracle Man," George Loane Tucker has achieved a double triumph. Recognizing the rock upon which George M. Cohan wrecked his dramatic structure when he made the Packard tale into a stage play and also realizing that the scene of the miracle of the little lame boy's discarded crutches is the great dramatic moment of the entire picture in spite of the circumstances that it occurs when the action is only one-third over, scenarist Tucker has not relied upon the moral regeneration of the four criminals for the sole motive of the rest of the drama but has thrown a deeper, romantic interest about the love affair between Tom Burke and Rose by using the young millionaire as Tom's rival and keeping the issue in doubt until the last moment.

Like Drawings by Dore

Any attempt to get down a just appreciation of George Loane Tucker's efforts as the director of "The Miracle Man," must concede him a full measure of praise in every detail of production and credit him with having distanced all of previous contributions to the screen. Pictorially, the drama is a succession of compositions that have true artistic form. The conception and handling of the scenes in which The Frog is the central figure, the iron-nerved mendicant who preys upon the compassion of humanity, are daring and masterly. Only in the drawings of Dore for Victor Hugo's "Hunchback of Notre Dame" can such criminal monstrosities be found. Surprise and fascinated horror grip the spectator when the crowded traffic is held up and through the rain and slime of a chill night on the grimy east side the distorted shape of a man is seen painfully dragging itself toward the gutter, the lower limbs apparently useless and their pitiable owner obliged to lie prone in the filth of the street.

The word painting of the French novelist descriptive of the hurrying mob of crippled beggars returning to their underground haunt, and the glee with which the lame halt and the blind join in the wild debauch which celebrates their success at beguiling the charitable of their spare coins is equalled by the scenes in "The Miracle Man" where The Frog appeals to the pity of the passerby and later on meets the three other members of his gang, exposes the villainess of his monstrous trickery and leads his companions in scoffing at the generosity that enables them to ply their nefarious trades.

The Scene of the Miracle

The entire first third of this picture contains every possible element demanded by dramatic art, theme, character drawing, suspense, steady upward trend of movement and a climax that is as convincing and as inevitable as the answer to a problem in Euclid. From the time that Tom Burke confides to his pals his scheme to use the healer as the bait for their trap to catch humanity and fatten upon the suffering of the unfortunate until the supreme moment when the little cripple watches the faked miracle worked by The Frog upon himself and, upheld by the faith within his own feeble body and twisted limbs, throws away his crutches and walks tremblingly into the outstretched arms of the white-headed old man at the top of the hill and The Frog and his fellow cheats realize they have seen a real miracle performed, the impulse driving the course of events forward is as resistless as the surge of the sea. It is doubtful if screen drama will ever know a more powerful moment than this climax to a bold stroke of criminal cunning—this triumph of goodness and trust over the forces of evil.

Moral Blindness is Overcome

All through the working out of the rest of the story there is a sense of diminished force, like the still reverberant but more distant peals of thunder after the height of the storm has passed. The coolness and skill with Tom Burke accepts demonstration of the healer's power to perform miracles, and directs the stream of banknotes and checks that flows from the grateful patients of the old man into the pockets of the crooks, are insights into the resources of the criminal that surround him with a new interest.

Then follows the startling discovery, made by the thieves themselves, that the power of the healer has reached even them, and their moral blindness is yielding to the curative strength of the almost helpless being of whose goodness and faith in humanity they had made a byword and a jest.

This reformation of the entire gang is blended with the romantic interest previously alluded to between the girl Rose and Tom Burke and the cleverly devised element of suspense brought in with the arrival of millionaire Richard King, who sees in the girl of the underworld all that is best and fairest in womanhood and who shows her that love is a thing that protects and honors its object, not debases and destroys.

The closing events, disclosing the death of the healer and the knowledge that Rose and Tom find the path to right living and happiness and will travel it as man and wife, bring the story to an ending that will meet with hearty approval.

Three Star Performances

George Loane Tucker has evidently labored unsparingly upon every branch of production connected with "The Miracle Man," and nowhere is his good judgment more manifest than in his selection of the cast. Three of the performances in the picture are sufficiently meritorious to rank with any impersonation so far known to the screen. These performances are the Tom Burke of Thomas Meighan, the Rose of Betty Compson and The Frog of Lon Chaney.

Admirable also is The Patriarch, as embodied by Joseph J. Dowling. The part is treated in the Tucker version of the story is not the positive figure the healer was in the spoken play. He is here both deaf and dumb, and failing eyesight leaves him almost totally blind before the end of the picture. He is also without any indication of mental vigor, a shadowy, mysterious figure who always remains in the background, notwithstanding his importance in the story. The subtle point made in the Cohan version, that the healer knew from the start his helpers were a gang of crooks but never let this fact be known to them, is faintly hinted at in the picture.

But the healer still remains the mainspring of the action, a symbol of unseen power that compels belief in itself and in the humble instrument that does its bidding. It is the reaction of this power for good upon the love of Rose and Tom that puts the human touch into the story and guarantees it a warm welcome and many a word of praise.

"The Miracle Man" is at the Faurot all this week and every performance should find the theater crowded.

RIALTO THEATRE.

"As a Man Thinks" Vital woman question.

Life in the Latin Quarter of Paris, where artists work and play, achieve fame or fall by the wayside, night life of the great metropolis, and then, in contrast, the home life of New York's aristocracy, this is the atmosphere of "As a Man Thinks" in which Leah Baird is featured at the Rialto Theater starting tomorrow.

Several years ago "As a Man Thinks" like Augustus Thomas's play set New York talking. It was the sensation of the hour and enjoyed a long Broadway run and road success with John Mason as the star. It has been produced by Harry Raver as a Four Star picture, the first of a serious adoption of the playwright, "To Hell with the Kaiser" has given the film a lavish setting and splendid direction.

AT THE LYRIC.

Clara Kimball Young and Her Own Company, in Miss Young's latest Select Picture, "The Better Wife," proved a popular headliner of last night's photoplay bill at the Lyric Theatre.

"The Better Wife" is the story of an American girl who goes to England and there becomes acquainted with Sir Richard Beverly and his family. Charming Page, the American girl, immediately falls in love with the Baronet's little boy, and when his mother is killed in an automobile accident, Charming tries to nurse him back to health. Gradually Sir Richard grows to love the American girl, but he refrains from mentioning it because of the sacred memory of his first wife. Following events tend to prove that the first Lady Beverly was not worthy of his love, and that the American girl, once he has made her the second Lady Beverly, is actually the better wife.

In Miss Young's supporting cast are seen Nigel Barrie, Kathleen Williams, Lillian Walker, Irving Cummings, Ben Alexander, Edward M. Kimball and others of note. It is

LYRIC TOMORROW.

The intent to which a motion picture company will go in an effort to make everything as true to life as possible is seen in "The Perfect Lover." Eugene O'Brien's first Selznick starring production, which comes on Tuesday to the Lyric Theatre.

Mr. O'Brien plays the role of a struggling young artist and several scenes in the play represent an art studio. To make certain of getting the proper atmosphere and realism, Director Ralph Ince engaged over a score of real artists from the Art Students League to appear in the production. These artists brought all their own materials to the studio, even their own model, and went about their work in regular everyday style.

During the days in which they worked in "The Perfect Lover," each one of the artists completed a painting that would be worthy of a place in any gallery. The gradual completion of the paintings from the first rough sketch to the perfected product can be seen as the scenes in "The Perfect Lover" unfold.

"Cupid's Revue," a whirly-girly miniature musical comedy company makes its initial appearances at the Orpheum theatre at the matinee and two night shows Monday. There are twelve people in the cast of "Cupid's Revue," three of them being comedians and nine pretty girls. Two musical farces will be offered during the Lima engagement. The first will be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The second will be offered Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The change will be made with the regular vaudeville bill at the Thursday matinee. The act carries special scenery, stage settings and electrical effects. The costuming is declared to be all-new and gorgeous. Each of the extravaganzas on the repertoire of "Cupid's Revue" is heralded as a whirl of mirth and melody and youth and beauty and is said to abound in tinkling tunes, graceful dances and exuberatingly funny situations. On the same program with "Cupid's Revue" for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, there are four other big time vaudeville acts. Sloan and Moore will mix thrills and laughter in a delightful novelty. The Dixie Trio is billed as "Songbirds from Jazzland." Swift and Dailey have something new and are billed as "The Sunshine Papir." Nelson and Bailey are a clever duo of comedy artists. All in all, this program is expected to prove one of the most enjoyable offered at the Orpheum thus far this season. There will be a complete change of four vaudeville acts with the offering of the "Cupid's Revue" at the Thursday matinee.

Find Difficulty
Getting New Jobs

LONDON.—Many girls who obtained clerical employment in government departments during the war are having a hard time finding new jobs since the cutting down of staffs has thrown them out of work. There have been numerous exposures of extravagance and incompetency in government offices and the girls who worked in them have come to be regarded by some employers as alders and abettors in the wasting of the tax payers' money. They are discovering that commercial and business firms do not want them. Some advertisements of situations vacant include with the statement,

"No government washouts need apply."

Employers consider their attitude well justified. "How can such girls be of any use in this house?" said the manageress of the West End branch of a big London firm. "Everyone knows that in a government office the girls spend more time in knitting jumpers and making tea than in working."

"It is a case of the many suffering for the sins of the few," said one government official.

An one the "other ill" was rheumatism. Even the pains from that had to go. Said Mr. Myers to Uniontown's Nerv-Worth druggist a few days ago:

Wade H. Guyton:—For five years I have been very nervous and all run down. Stomach and digestion in very bad condition. Gas formed in my stomach and pressed against my heart and caused it to palpitate and intermit. This greatly alarmed me and I was in a troubled state of mind and uneasy as to the result. Had severe headaches and rheumatism. I tried all kinds of so-called remedies but got no relief whatever. I saw Nerv-Worth statements in the papers from persons I knew who had been greatly benefited and I purchased one bottle of Nerv-Worth and took it as directed and am glad to say that all the ailments mentioned have gone and I feel like a new man and with all my normal strength and vigor. Sleep good, stomach and digestion fine. Good appetite and no more pains. Nerv-Worth worked wonders for me.

One of the most phenomenal sales known in Lima business history is now being conducted at the Loewenstein store on the square. Six days have elapsed since the opening of the sale and it continues without abatement.

The sale opened last week in warm weather but for days the store was crowded. Overcoats were tried on and bought while the perspiration ran down the faces of both clerk and customer. Only unusual bargains could bring this about.

F. S. L. Orr, representing the D. Hoppe Co., is in charge and to him belongs the credit for the pulling publicity that has brought people to Lima from many miles around.

Thousands of satisfied customers have frequented the store and all agree that everything is sold as advertised.

For more than 25 years this old established clothing house has been doing business at the same location. The proprietor, Leon Loewenstein, counts his friends and customers by the hundreds. When he announced his retirement and informed the public to that effect, people came as far as 50 miles to share in the quitting business sale; for they fully realized that only the world's best makes were carried by Leon Loewenstein. And as they are now being sold out at cost or half cost, in many cases, it is almost impossible to serve the eager crowds which daily throng the store. Next week will see another record breaking crowd, so plan to attend this greatest of all sales.

WILL AID DRIVE FOR PREVENTING RAIL ACCIDENTS

Officials of Railroads Running Out of Lima To Join National Movement.

WILL OPEN OCTOBER 18

Various Methods Will Be Used To Teach Safety To All.

Officials of railroads operating out of Lima will co-operate with the safety section of the United States railroad administration in a national railroad accident prevention drive on all railroads under federal control from October 18 to 31, inclusive.

The plan involves an intensified effort to prevent all accidents during the period of the drive by publicity, meetings and the definite instruction and education of all employees to the end that they will understand that safety is the most important consideration in the operation of railroads.

It is the purpose of the railroad administration to demonstrate in this manner that most accidents are avoidable and unnecessary, and to definitely impress everyone with the fact that the record can and must be materially improved.

1200 Safety Committees
On all railroads under federal control there are today some 1,200 safety committees, composed of approximately 25,000 officers and employees, the latter predominating, who meet every 30 days to discuss ways and means of preventing railroad accidents. Of this number, 65 committees with a membership of 1,065 officers and employees, are local to the Pennsylvania lines west, and the impending campaign centers about these committees, all of which are taking an active interest in the preparations being made.

1918 Figures
During the same period of 1918, eight employees were killed and 241 injured on the Pennsylvania lines west, and it is hoped that through the earnest and active co-operation and assistance of everyone concerned, accidents to employees during the campaign will be entirely avoided. It is also thought that by spreading during this period in the prevention of accidents to employees, the subject of safety will be so forcefully brought to attention of the entire community that a marked improvement will be noted in the avoidance of accidents to all classes of persons.

THE STORE OF THE PEOPLE

claiming during this period in the prevention of accidents to employees, the subject of safety will be so forcefully brought to attention of the entire community that a marked improvement will be noted in the avoidance of accidents to all classes of persons.

The safety bureau of the Pennsylvania lines west is endeavoring to impress upon all its employees that it is better to cause a delay than to cause an accident, that it is better to be careful a thousand times than to be crippled once, and to make the men understand that their lives and their limbs are their most precious possessions, and at the same time the greatest assets they and their employees have.

Will Show Standings
The national prevention drive is being brought to the attention of the employees in every conceivable manner—by meetings, by rallies, by personal talks by bulletins, posters, etc. At the close of the drive a record will be published showing the standing of each railroad and each road is completing in this work with the object of attaining first place in this record.

Since the safety organization on the Pennsylvania lines west was organized 12 months ago, there has been 14 fewer employees killed and 2076 fewer injured than during the same period of the preceding year. This record demonstrates beyond question the possibilities of an organized and well directed effort such as that involved in the coming campaign.

AFTER CHURCH SLEEPERS

LORAIN, O., Oct. 12.—After criticizing those who stay at home to read papers and those who go late to religious service, Rev. L. O. Newcomer, pastor of the Church of Christ, turned on those who sleep in church. "People who sleep in church should be compelled to pay extra just as they do on Pullman cars," he said.

FERNEDING FOR U.S. JUDGE, ENDORSED BY CHAIRMAN DURBIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 12.—James Ross, Democratic party leader at Columbus and chairman of the Franklin county Democratic committee, has just sent to Washington an enthusiastic endorsement of Judge H. L. Ferneding of Dayton for appointment as district federal judge to succeed the late Judge H. C. Hollister.

With Ross and W. W. Durbin, democratic state executive committee chairman, both pulling for Ferneding as against John W. Peck, who is endorsed by Senator Pomerene, the situation is growing in interest.

It was stated at the department of justice today that Attorney General Palmer has not had time to give the matter his consideration and that he has not decided whom he will recommend. The appointment rests with the president, and it is likely to hang fire until the president can act or until some policy of handling such cases can be matured.

Dayton Is Deserving

Chairman Ross suggests that the appointment rightfully belongs to Dayton. He says:

"Judge Ferneding is now one of our judges of the state court of appeals for this district and he has made an enviable record. His education is such as to equip him, and his experience on the bench makes him qualified to fill that bench with ability and courage. He is young enough to make him available at once. He has been a consistent democrat, is married and resides in Dayton. It occurs to me Dayton should be accorded this honor this time."

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 13.—One of two "burglar-proof" safes, carried out of stores last night and containing more than $1,200, was found by police this morning more than eight miles away from the store

GLOBE Hot Blast Heaters

We are mighty glad to announce that we are now in a position to cater to your stove needs and can offer you prices that talk for themselves. Our contracts for the season's stoves were signed last year and the stoves we now offer are tagged with prices that prevailed in September, 1918.

If you are considering the purchase of a stove compare the GLOBE with any other and then you will know why we say the GLOBE is the best stove on the market. This together with our attractive prices makes the GLOBE the logical stove for you to buy.

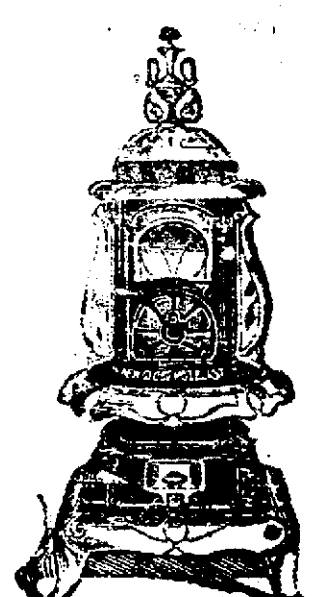

The heating question is easily solved whether you have only one room or eight as the GLOBE line includes a size for every purpose. The latest development in hot blast construction burning slack or run of mine coal as easily as lump coal or coke, is the big feature of every size from the 14 size GLOBE OAKLET to the big 18 inch fire pot in the NEW GLOBE HOT BLAST.

Every door and damper on the GLOBE is fitted by hand, making it possible to have control of the fire at all times. The grates, fire pots, ash pits, etc., are made of heavy cast iron that is heat holding and rust resisting—a stove that will give years of satisfactory service with so small a coal consumption that it will surprise you.

The GLOBE has always made friends wherever it has been used because it makes the long Winter days and evenings warm and cozy. We would be pleased to have you look over our line of heaters and compare prices with any stove of similar quality. Early selections are most advisable as the stoves we buy after our present stock is sold will be higher in price with no assurance from the manufacturer that he will be able to ship us any stoves at any price. Make your selection now—a small deposit will hold your stove until you are ready to use it.

The Globe Quality Line of Hot Blast Heaters are most attractively priced from $28.75 upwards.

GERMANS BUY U. S. ARMY MOTOR TRUCKS

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN GERMANY—Twelve hundred motor trucks abandoned by the German army in the area taken over by the Americans as part of the armistice material were sold recently to a syndicate of German automobile dealers. This deal virtually completes the work of the Coblenz branch of the United States Liquidation Commission which has been under the direction of Junius G. Adams, of Ashville, N. C. special commissioner of the American Army of Occupation.

Continuation of disposal of surplus army material in occupied Germany will hereafter be under a direction of a general sales board of the American forces in Germany of which Lieutenant Colonel T. H. Kruttschnitt has been appointed as chief. The army board will be under the supervision of the liquidation commission with headquarters in Paris until the final stocks are sold.

The sale of surplus property of the American Army at the Antwerp base which also has been completed brought to the government $14,000,000 most of the goods disposed of to the Belgian government, bringing a better price than could have been obtained in the United States. By the sale of a part of surplus stocks of the American Forces in Germany, much of which was sold to German civilians, the sum of $11,000,000 was realized. Among the material sold recently to German dealers was 2,000,000 pounds of candy of a kind not particularly in demand among the American soldiers.

MORE WOMEN DOCTORS

LONDON.—One of every five doctors who completed their training in England this year was a woman, and authorities declare that next year the proportion will be larger. In May 1918, according to the British Medical Journal, there were 2,250 women doctors in the kingdom, several times more than for the corresponding date of 1914.

IT IS YOUR FIGHT!

With 265,000 Soldiers, Sailors and War Workers absent and disfranchised last November, Prohibition was adopted by a scant majority.

The authority given the Prohibitionists by this lessened vote was directed against "the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage."

Prohibitionists went far beyond the authority granted them and jammed through the General Assembly of Ohio the Crabbe Prohibition Enforcement Act.

The Crabbe Act is aimed NOT against the "sale and manufacture for sale," but against the INDIVIDUAL and INDIVIDUAL RIGHT to USE and POSSESS alcoholic beverages.

The Crabbe Act, barring a few absurdly narrow exceptions, makes it "unlawful for any person to manufacture, sell, barter, POSSESS, transport, export, deliver, FURNISH or GIVE AWAY intoxicating liquors." (Section 4.)

The Crabbe Act would prohibit any person making a bottle of home-made wine or beer in his own home or on his own farm for his own use, and provides heavy penalties ranging from a heavy fine to a jail and even to a state penitentiary sentence for violations. (Section 26.)

The Crabbe Act requires any farmer making cider for sale to first secure a permit, also pay a fee of from $2 to $10. (Section 7 and 12.)

The Crabbe Act authorizes the search of your home by any officer upon complaint of ANY PERSON. (Section 44.)

Under the Crabbe Act any dry detective can ransack your home, pry into your personal affairs, smash your furniture, knock you down, insult and injure your wife, daughter, sister or any other member of your family, and under Section 71 of the Crabbe Act all he has to plead is that "he was acting in good faith" and he "shall not be liable either civilly or criminally for any act performed by him, either with or without process of law."

Under the Crabbe Act every conceivable means is taken to restrict and oppress the individual citizen of Ohio.

No person is safe and no home is sacred from the prying activities of the dry detective.

YOU and YOUR HOME, Mr. Citizen, are now the objects of the prohibitionist's attack.

The fight against prohibition is now the fight of the private citizen. It is part of the world fight against SUMPTUARY laws and AUTOCRACY—FOR INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS as precious at home as abroad.

It is the fight of every American Citizen to preserve AMERICAN RIGHTS.

Horse Thieves Busy in Berlin

BERLIN—Thirty-five to forty horses are stolen each day in Berlin, and a very small percentage are ever returned to the owners despite the creation of a special police department to combat this evil. The horses disappear forever because they are usually immediately slaughtered and the meat sold through illicit trade channels. The thieves watch for teams of drivers of which have left them for a moment, and drive the horses away. If the wagons contain anything of value it is stolen and the horses are taken to secret barns and sheds, or even to wooded suburban sections, and killed immediately. Insurance companies that used to insure horses and teams will do so no more.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS TWO GOOD TALKS ON H. C. L. AT MEETING

Edward Gordon and Frank J. Banta Offer Reasons for Conditions.

BLAME PRODUCTION

Meeting Was One Of The Most Interesting Ever Held By Club.

Two interesting talks by local men, who are well informed on their respective subjects, marked the weekly noonday meeting of the Rotary Club, held this noon at the Hotel Norval. The first address was by Edward Gordon, manager of Swift and Company, local packers, who had as his subject, "The High Cost of Living." One point brought out by Mr. Gordon was that the high cost is not due so much to profiteering, as lack of production, that there is too much consumption and not enough labor.

The other speaker was Frank J. Banta, manager of the Banta and Sons Candy factory, who spoke on the sugar situation. Mr. Banta who can speak with authority on the above subject, stated that a recent report showed that 600,000 tons of sugar were bought by foreign countries right here in America, and shipped overseas, and that already the 1919 sugar supply was 400,000 tons below the average.

The situation which has been serious in Lima as well as other cities for some weeks past, will be somewhat relieved the latter part of this week, when several carloads of beet sugar from Ottawa, O., refinery will be shipped here, Mr. Banta said.

Fred H. Hubbard, manager of the Ottawa Refinery, and a member of the Rotary Club, promised to send Lima three carloads of sugar a week, during the time of production. This amount will help materially in relieving the situation here. The meeting this noon was very well attended, and was voted one of the most interesting held in some weeks. The two local men were the only speakers on today's program.

GLEN S. ROHN SEEKS DIVORCE

Alleging that she has failed to perform her household and marital duties, and refused him her association and companionship for the past three years, Glen S. Rohn, Monday, asked Common Pleas Court to grant him a divorce from Mable Rohn.

They were married, according to the statement of the plaintiff in his petition filed Saturday, at Toledo, January 31, 1904.

The plaintiff has custody of the children, Richard C. 13, Randolph R. 10, and Rhoda, 7. It is stated in the petition.

Money is Taken From Small Boy

Seven year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Neely, of 212 North Charles street, was robbed of money with which it was sent to purchase groceries, according to report made to police, Monday morning.

The child, according to the report made to police, was sent to Cook's grocery store, at 915 West High street, with $1 tied up in a handkerchief and a written order for groceries. Upon arrival at the store, the parents say, the child laid the money and the order on the counter, a clerk in the store picking up the order and leaving the money.

When the clerk returned with the goods the dollar was gone, as was also a tall unshaven man who was in the store when the child arrived.

Another Example of Gang's Tactics

One of the outstanding features of the 1919 municipal campaign in Lima will always be the heartless treatment accorded to Carl K. Rowlands, popular young business man, who was ditched after the Gale-Metheny-Etc. steam roller had run over him and his capable outfit. Rowlands was the leading candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor, when the gang put the skids under him and named instead Colonel John Harley, who, it is said, didn't want to be a candidate, having an ambition to run for congress. Harley has not made a vigorous campaign, so far, knowing the odds are against him and that Burkhardt is gaining in strength daily. The only argument the gang can find against Burkhardt is that he formerly was employed by the Ohio Electric, which everyone knows—and everyone also knows that Burkhardt will wear no man's collar and when he is elected the Ohio Electric will get no favors from him.

AIRPLANE TO MAKE PASSENGER TRIPS HERE THIS WEEK

Lima folks, who would like to view the city from above will have the opportunity during the next few days, since Lieut. R. S. Haines, who is a licensed pilot, will take up all who desire to make an aerial trip. Lieut. Haines reached Lima shortly after the noon hour Monday afternoon, having flown from Chicago. He stopped at the Bryan aviation field this morning and looked over some of the planes that are taking part in the trans-continental air race, and then took off for Lima, making the distance in fast time.

Lieut. Haines was a "stunt instructor" in the aviation service during the war and was said to be one of the most skillful aviators in the service. He was sent to the San Diego, California, school, after learning to fly and became the instructor in aerial acrobatics there.

He owns the airplane in which he made the trip to Lima, having recently purchased it and is on his way South, where he has a long line of engagements booked during the winter months.

He was accompanied here by E. J. S. V. Jordan, former football star and just discharged from the Navy, where he helped to down U-boats during the big war.

The first man to take the air trip Monday afternoon was R. Kenneth Kerr, of the Times Advertising department.

The latest report reaching police regarding the robbery of F. G. Nunnemaker, grocer at 806 South Main street, is to the effect that the amount obtained was only about $30, instead of $130, as first reported.

Nunnemaker, according to the report, stated as he was leaving his store, Saturday night, at the close of business, he was accosted by two men, who he cannot describe and told to put up his "mitts." He was then struck over the eye and knocked down. He also received other bruises about the head, evidently from falling to the sidewalk, he reports.

RUSSIAN ARMY IS HEADING TOWARD PETROGRAD NOW

PARIS, October 13.—Important troop movements are occurring in the direction of Riga, according to a telegram received here from Basel. Estonian troops are said to have left Segewold for Riga, 30 miles distant and Lettish reinforcements and other Estonian detachments are reported to be en route to Libau on board a transport for the purpose of joining Lettish forces which have been landed there from British vessels.

BIG PUSH COMMENCES. LONDON, Oct. 13.—The capture of Yamburg marks the beginning of the push by troops of the Russian northwestern army under General Yudenitch toward Petrograd, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail filed on Saturday at Libau. General Glazenapp commanded the capture of the place and is reported to have taken four complete Bolshevik regiments, 2,000 other soviet troops and the entire staff of the tenth Bolshevik division. General Glazenapp losses are reported to have been 27 killed and 150 wounded.

General Vladimiroff, who was mainly instrumental in organizing the offensive, is quoted by the dispatch as saying that the German-Russian offensive under Colonel Avaloff-Bermond came too late to stop the advance of the Russian northwestern army.

As far as latest reports disclose the situation, Lettish troops still hold the eastern part of Riga, on the right of the Duna, but there is no news later than Saturday and the position is obscure. All reports concur in stating that Colonel Avaloff-Bermond's troops have occupied Thorenberg the western part of the city, and are bombarding positions held by the Lettish. Nothing further has been learned here regarding the reinforcements which it was said were landed from British ships or whether Estonian troops are coming to the aid of the Lettish.

The statement attributed to General Vladimiroff in the despatch to the MAIL expresses the belief in Riga that Colonel Avaloff-Bermond's attack on Riga was a part of a scheme to advance in Petrograd, which is regarded to have been checkmated by General Yudenitch's push northward.

Secure Injunction Today in Court

Ernest E. Uptisgraf and Ada I. Uptisgraf were allowed a temporary injunction in Common Pleas Court, Monday, preventing the construction of a sewer which they claim would weaken the sidewalk in front of their property on South Franklin street and cause other damages during its construction.

The defendants in the case, Lenore Klatt and Herman Klatt have property adjoining, and it is claimed by the plaintiffs that the construction of a sewer which has been commenced, leads to a sewer which was constructed by them for their own personal use. This, they aver, if completed will damage the lawn in front of their property, and eventually cause other damages besides weakening the sidewalk during the excavation necessary for its construction.

HOPE TO SETTLE MARINE STRIKE IN NEW YORK SOON

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Hope for an early settlement of the strike of 40,000 longshoremen and marine workers which has tied up trans-Atlantic, coastwise and harbor traffic here for almost a week, appeared bright today, according to T. V. O'Connor, president of the International Longshoremen's Association and John F. Riley, chairman of the strike committee. As a result of a stormy meeting last night, at which delegates from 54 locals urged the men to go back to work, a mass meeting will be held tonight for ratifying or rejecting the proposal to return tomorrow and wait until December 1 to press demands for increased wages.

Meanwhile the food situation concerning products coming to the city from New Jersey still was serious. Not an ounce of food was removed from ships. The milk shortage was somewhat relieved when the milk trains were switched here by the way of Poughkeepsie.

"Our investigation of labor legislation in the United States leads us to believe that Ohio is further advanced than any other state," the consul general wrote the commission.

Rickard Thinks Bout Between Dempsey and Big Jess Would Again Prove Large Drawing Card.

(BY JAMES F. BURBA)

On your toes, now you fight fans and grab this bit of news, for it's hot stuff, and it's rarer than a day in June or a seat on a Lima street car—fight promoters are endeavoring to get Jess Willard to once more don the gloves, and stage a comeback. If even the thought of poof Jess was not so serious, this announcement would be ludicrous. Big Jess is done, and if he ever steps into the squared circle again, the fans are certainly going to jump in the middle of the street and play "Who'd a thunk it." He's dead, so why not let him spend his reclining years in peace, and not be harassing him now?

In our estimation, Willard never was a fighter. Just before the battle last July Lima sports gave us the merry laugh when we touted Dempsey to knock his block off. Dempsey did that, little trick, and few fans realize just what crimp the large Cowboy put into the sport when he sat in his chair and threw that white towel into the ring. He near queered the heavyweight game. All for this, does he deserve a chance to stage a comeback? All in unison answer NO. With much accent on the first syllable of the word no.

Does Not Discuss It

Had Willard stood up and fought Dempsey as a man, we would welcome his appearance in the ring. He might have been game to get, but that is not all that constitutes a game fighter. It is our belief, as well as the belief of others, that a man used for gameness would never have tossed the towel into the pit. Can you imagine the late John L. Sullivan doing a stunt like that?

Oh, well, let's quit harping on the past, and catch our stride with the present. Willard probably never will fight again but there are two people, who were quite prominent at Toledo, who would like to see him try conclusions with Jack Dempsey once more. One is Ray Archer, Willard's manager, and the other is Tex Rickard, promoter of the big go in Toledo last July. Tex believes the bout would draw again, and he is willing to hunt up a spot, and talk business to Jack and Jess if they will condescend.

Not Much Hope

Tex has not much hope of inducing Willard to go through a severe training grind again and take the short end of the purse just to get even with Dempsey, but he is ready and anxious to start the ball rolling if the fighters give him the word.

At that, another meeting between Willard and Dempsey would settle many a dispute that has been raging unabated since the Toledo slaughter. There are many still unconvinced that Dempsey is as much better than Willard as the result indicated and numerous others who fondly imagine that Willard can reverse the outcome.

They argue that Willard was too confident, took reckless chances and was licked by a punch he took because he did not think he could be hurt. Now that he knows better, they say, Jess would fight carefully, as he always did before, and perhaps do things to Jack after the latter tried trying to accomplish what he did at Toledo when "Jess was holding his chin out for him."

Says, He Might Agree

Here is the way Archer talked about it a few days ago: "I don't know how Jess feels about it. I left him three days after the fight and have been in New York ever since. I am on my way to see him now and will learn all about his plans. Jess has plenty of money and is all wrapped up in the oil business. He might agree to another fight, but I haven't much hope."

"Willard was in good physical trim at Toledo, except that he neglected to harden his flesh. Dempsey was tiring fast, and if Jess had been able to see him he would have kept on going. Jess would be sure to pick his countenance for another fight."

"Willard did not fight as he can fight. He chased after Dempsey in that first round and kept leading to him. I never saw Willard do that before. That was what gave Dempsey a chance to shoot over that left. I disagree with the experts who claim that first body punch hurt Willard. It was the left to the chin that licked him. He did not recover until after the fight—and then it was too late, of course."

JOE BOYER WINS CINCINNATI AUTO STAKE

Holds Lead From Drop of Flag—Art Klein Finishes Second—Kurt Mitke Is Third.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 13.—Joe Boyer won the world's series automobile sweepstakes race of 250 miles at the Cincinnati speedway Sunday afternoon with an average time of 101.69 miles per hour. Art Klein finished second, and Kurt Mitke was third, Dave Lewis, fourth, D. Hickey, fifth, and Tom Alley, sixth.

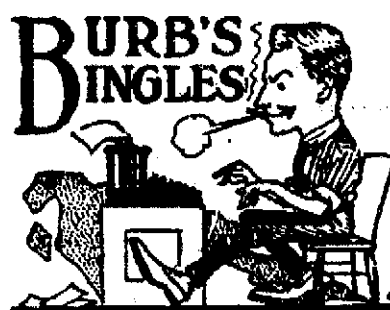

Boyer got off a good start, practically led his field all the way and finished an easy winner. From the drop of the flag to the end he never entered the pit on account of trouble. Klein made a fine drive but was unable to overtake Boyer. Several postponements and threatening weather resulted in a small attendance. Personages in the automobile world from all sections of the country were present. A slippery track threatened trouble in the first few laps, but a brisk wind and sunshine quickly dried the big oval and the race was unmarred by even a minor accident.

With the Trotters

Frank Callahan, the Tiffin, O., owner, who has raced stables of horses for many years, has announced his complete retirement and has sold all his horses, including Great Northern 2:12½, Ora Lou 2:11½, and others, including the good trotter, Willow Mack 2:10½, that was sold to Italian parties. Willow Mack has been racing for many seasons and has been a very consistent horse.

The five-year-old trotting stallion, E. Colorado 2:11¼, by Colorado E. 2:06¼, that made almost a clean sweep of the halfmile track stakes this year, will be seen on the raging Grand next season, having been purchased by Walter Cox for his patron, Barton Pardee, of Atlantic City. E. Colorado was owned by George Estabrook, the wholesale grocer, of Denver, and won ten races on the half-milers this year. At Lexington he trotted in 2:06¼, resulting in his sale.

The former Southern Ohio pacer, Hal H., 2:11¼, by Hallelujah Hal, is now in the Fred Teachout stable up in Michigan and won a number of races in that state the past season. He was bred at the old Moranza Stock Farm, Sabina, Ohio, where his sire, a son of Direct Hal 2:04¼, and a very fast horse that was never raced, stood.

Owing to the heavy rains of Friday and Saturday, the Murphy street ball park was no fit place to stage the scheduled contest yesterday between the Dayton Triangles and "Our Boys." Weather permitting the series will be completed next Sunday and the Sabbath following, and this will probably see the end of the local season. Whether or not the series will continue this coming Sunday will be announced later, the local management said last night.

At the Saturday morning session, the speakers will be Dr. Strayer, and Dr. L. D. Coffman, dean of the School of Education, University of Minnesota. A number of departmental meetings will be held, for which well known speakers have been secured.

On the state organization committee Principal R. L. Offenbauer, of Central high school, Lima, is chairman of the executive committee while Superintendent C. A. Arganbright is chairman of the Teachers employment committee.

Lima teachers will leave here early Friday morning, October 24 for Toledo, while many will also go on Thursday afternoon. He had been in a serious condition for the past two weeks, and little hopes were entertained for his recovery.

DOG IS DELIVERED BY AIRPLANE TO MR. ROY GREGG

Roy T. Gregg, well known Lima merchant, is the first resident of this city to receive a present delivered by airplane. Monday afternoon an airplane dropped into Lima, driven by Lieut. R. S. Haines, formerly of Uncle Sam's aerial services, and he was accompanied by Ensign S. V. Jordan, recently discharged from the navy.

The two officers brought Mr. Gregg, who is a friend of the pair, a week old bull pup, that had been presented them in South Bend.

The dog enjoyed his airplane trip, and will always have the rating of being a high flyer.

The pup undoubtedly enjoys the distinction of being the youngest occupant of an airplane that ever flew.

NEW OHIO HEALTH LAWS TO GO INTO EFFECT ON JAN 1

State Will Be Divided Into Districts Presided Over By Competent Officers.

UPSETS OLD SYSTEM

Civil Service Commission To Conduct Test For Attachés.

State, municipal and county authorities are busy preparing to put into effect January 1st, the new health laws of the state which were passed by the last legislature. The bill, which was passed April 17th, and approved by Governor Cox May 9th, will, when it becomes effective practically revolutionize the present health laws of Ohio.

One of the biggest jobs in connection with the new bill falls to the state civil service commission, which must conduct examinations for district health officers, nurses, clerks and office help. In not only every county in the state, but also in every city with a population of more than 25,000 at the last census.

The commission has agreed upon the salaries to be paid the district health commissioners. Grade 1, commissioners will be paid $6,000 a year for the first three years, $6,500 the second three years, and $7,200, the maximum amount, after the sixth year of service.

Grade 2 health commissioners will be paid $5,000, $5,500 and $6,000; grade 3, $4,000, $4,400 and $4,800; grade 4, $3,000, $3,300 and $3,600; grade 5, $2,000, $2,200 and $2,400.

Lima in Second Grade
The first grade health commissioners will be appointed in cities like Columbus, Cincinnati, Toledo, Cleveland and Dayton, while grade 2 will be appointed in cities like Lima, Akron, Youngstown, Newark, Portsmouth and other cities of these populations. Grade 3 will be appointed for the larger counties, outside of the cities, grade 4, for smaller counties and grade 5, for the smaller county seats.

While the law provides that examinations for these district health commissioners shall be open to suitably qualified persons without restriction as to residence, the commission must give preference to eligibles resident in the district. Work on preparation of the bulletin for this examination is about completed and the examinations will be held some time in November.

The examination for nurses, one or more to be appointed to every health district, will be held later, and then the examination for clerical help, such as may be needed for each health district.

Size of Districts
The health districts under the law will be each county outside of the larger cities, and in each city from one to three districts will be set out, so that in cities like Columbus there will be at least two districts for the city itself and one for Franklin county outside the city of Columbus.

Each city having a population of 25,000 will constitute a district and the townships and municipalities in each county having a population exclusive of any city having a population of 25,000 or more shall constitute a general health district.

In case of counties with a less population than 25,000 there may be a union of two general health districts and a municipal health district located within such district in the county in which the larger part of the area of such population is located.

The law provides, however, that the state department of health may declare cities with even a smaller population than 25,000 a separate health district. The state board of health.

Dr. King's New Discovery has relieved colds and coughs for fifty years

It was an unusually high quality cold, cough, gripe, and croup remedy when introduced half a century ago. Not once in all the years since then has the quality been allowed to deteriorate. Its effectiveness in combating colds and coughs has been proved thousands of times in thousands of families. Taken by grownups and given to the little ones for the safe, sure treatment of colds and gripe, coughs and croup, it leaves absolutely no disagreeable after-effects. so has the right to eliminate districts where it finds that such municipality does not maintain a sanitary administration "equal to that provided in the general health district in which such municipality is located."

District Boards
Each district shall have a board of health consisting of five members, who shall serve without compensation, and this board will be in general charge of all matters. In municipalities and townships with an insufficient population to become a health district an advisory council shall be organized, which shall consist of the mayor of each municipality and the chairman of township trustees.

Headquarters for the health commissioners in larger cities must be furnished by city council, and for rural districts by the county commissioners. One-half the cost of keeping up the expense of these offices will be paid from the state treasury and the other half from municipal and county funds.

The new law gives the state board of health much wider powers and provides for regular health commissioners who must devote their entire time to their work.

MANY DIPHTHERIA CASES REPORTED

No Indications of An Epidemic In Lima, However, Doctors Say.

Quite a large number of diphtheria cases have been reported by physicians to the local health office within the past several weeks, and although there is no indication of an epidemic, still the number of cases are more than they should be for this time of the year. The cause of the spread of diphtheria is not known, and is a puzzle to physicians.

The cases do not all occur among school children though many cases are in families where children attend school. Quite a number of cases are among children from one and a half years old up to school age.
